Early Life and Inspirations

April Peter grew up on a family farm in rural Canada. From a young age, she developed a passion for agriculture and the outdoors. However, she also noticed the lack of women in leadership roles in the industry. This realization fueled her desire to make a difference and create opportunities for women in agriculture.

The Birth of "Like a Girl"

In 2017, Peter launched the "Like a Girl" farming initiative. The name was inspired by Always' famous "Like a Girl" campaign, which sought to challenge gender stereotypes. Peter's goal was to empower women and girls by showing them that they can be successful in agriculture and that they should never be afraid to do things "like a girl."

Empowering Women through Training and Mentorship

The "Like a Girl" initiative provides training and mentorship programs for women in agriculture. These programs cover topics such as leadership, financial management, and modern farming techniques. Through these programs, Peter equips women with the skills and confidence they need to succeed in the industry.

Breaking Gender Barriers

Peter's work has not been without challenges. She has faced skepticism and discrimination from some members of the agricultural community. However, her determination to empower women has never wavered. She continues to work tirelessly to break down gender barriers and create a more inclusive and equitable industry.

Recognition and Impact

Peter's tireless efforts have been recognized and celebrated both locally and internationally. She has received numerous awards, including the Governor General's Sovereign Medal for Volunteers and the YWCA Women of Distinction Award. Her work has also been featured in major media outlets such as the BBC, CNN, and Forbes.

Inspiration for Future Generations

April Peter is an inspiration to women and girls everywhere. She demonstrates that anyone can achieve their dreams, regardless of their gender. Her work is not only empowering women in agriculture but also inspiring future generations to challenge gender stereotypes and pursue careers in any field they desire.

April Peter's "Like a Girl" farming initiative is a testament to the power of one person to make a difference. Through her unwavering commitment to empowering women, she is not only transforming the face of agriculture but also creating a more just and equitable world. Peter's story serves as a reminder that we can all be a force for change and that anything is possible when we believe in ourselves and work together.
