The Seventh Cross is a powerful and moving novel about the horrors of the Nazi regime. Written by Anna Seghers in 1942, the novel tells the story of seven prisoners who escape from a concentration camp. They are hunted by the Gestapo, and each of them faces a different fate.

The novel opens with the escape of the seven prisoners from the Westhofen concentration camp. They are led by Georg Heisler, a former communist who was arrested for his political beliefs. The other prisoners are a diverse group of individuals, including a Jewish doctor, a homosexual artist, and a young woman who was arrested for helping her father escape from Germany.

The prisoners travel through the German countryside, trying to avoid detection by the Gestapo. They face many dangers along the way, including hunger, cold, and the threat of being betrayed. They also witness the horrors of the Nazi regime firsthand, as they see how the Nazis persecute and murder Jews, homosexuals, and other minorities.

One by one, the prisoners are captured or killed. Heisler is the last one to survive, and he is eventually captured by the Gestapo. He is tortured and executed, but he never gives up hope. He dies with the words "The seventh cross will be for me" on his lips.

The Seventh Cross is a powerful and moving novel about the horrors of the Nazi regime. It is a story of courage, resilience, and hope in the face of adversity. The novel is a reminder of the importance of fighting against tyranny and oppression.
